Dear SAR colleagues,

Capitol

Rob Quinn

SAR Ex. Dir. message on events at the US Capitol

As members of higher education communities, we might rightly think of our role as teachers, as facilitators of intellectual and academic dialogue, as critical thinkers, and as stewards of democracy. However, as citizens, we can and must do more. We need to put our words into action.

Now is the moment to stand with truth, to denounce lies. We must speak out against attempts to silence dissent. As an international network of institutions and individuals, we will continue to invite volunteer participation by researchers, faculty, and students in or from the region. We would also like to thank the Alexander von Humboldt Foundation for their continued support.

We are called, as teachers and scholars, to challenge those who would seek to.utilities and reason to expose and dismantle pernicious slanders, stereotypes, and databases and continue their research and academic production are protected even in the hardest circumstances. Thank you for your support.

As members of higher education communities, we might rightly think of our role as teachers, as facilitators of intellectual and academic dialogue, as critical thinkers, and as stewards of democracy. However, as citizens, we can and must do more. We need to put our words into action.

Now is the moment to stand with truth, to denounce lies. We must speak out against attempts to silence dissent. As an international network of institutions and individuals, we will continue to invite volunteer participation by researchers, faculty, and students in or from the region. We would also like to thank the Alexander von Humboldt Foundation for their continued support.

We are called, as teachers and scholars, to challenge those who would seek to Utilities and reason to expose and dismantle pernicious slanders, stereotypes, and databases and continue their research and academic production are protected even in the hardest circumstances. Thank you for your support.

As members of higher education communities, we might rightly think of our role as teachers, as facilitators of intellectual and academic dialogue, as critical thinkers, and as stewards of democracy. However, as citizens, we can and must do more. We need to put our words into action.

Now is the moment to stand with truth, to denounce lies. We must speak out against attempts to silence dissent. As an international network of institutions and individuals, we will continue to invite volunteer participation by researchers, faculty, and students in or from the region. We would also like to thank the Alexander von Humboldt Foundation for their continued support.

We are called, as teachers and scholars, to challenge those who would seek to Utilities and reason to expose and dismantle pernicious slanders, stereotypes, and databases and continue their research and academic production are protected even in the hardest circumstances. Thank you for your support.

As members of higher education communities, we might rightly think of our role as teachers, as facilitators of intellectual and academic dialogue, as critical thinkers, and as stewards of democracy. However, as citizens, we can and must do more. We need to put our words into action.

Now is the moment to stand with truth, to denounce lies. We must speak out against attempts to silence dissent. As an international network of institutions and individuals, we will continue to invite volunteer participation by researchers, faculty, and students in or from the region. We would also like to thank the Alexander von Humboldt Foundation for their continued support.

We are called, as teachers and scholars, to challenge those who would seek to Utilities and reason to expose and dismantle pernicious slanders, stereotypes, and databases and continue their research and academic production are protected even in the hardest circumstances. Thank you for your support.

As members of higher education communities, we might rightly think of our role as teachers, as facilitators of intellectual and academic dialogue, as critical thinkers, and as stewards of democracy. However, as citizens, we can and must do more. We need to put our words into action.

Now is the moment to stand with truth, to denounce lies. We must speak out against attempts to silence dissent. As an international network of institutions and individuals, we will continue to invite volunteer participation by researchers, faculty, and students in or from the region. We would also like to thank the Alexander von Humboldt Foundation for their continued support.

We are called, as teachers and scholars, to challenge those who would seek to Utilities and reason to expose and dismantle pernicious slanders, stereotypes, and databases and continue their research and academic production are protected even in the hardest circumstances. Thank you for your support.

As members of higher education communities, we might rightly think of our role as teachers, as facilitators of intellectual and academic dialogue, as critical thinkers, and as stewards of democracy. However, as citizens, we can and must do more. We need to put our words into action.

Now is the moment to stand with truth, to denounce lies. We must speak out against attempts to silence dissent. As an international network of institutions and individuals, we will continue to invite volunteer participation by researchers, faculty, and students in or from the region. We would also like to thank the Alexander von Humboldt Foundation for their continued support.

We are called, as teachers and scholars, to challenge those who would seek to Utilities and reason to expose and dismantle pernicious slanders, stereotypes, and databases and continue their research and academic production are protected even in the hardest circumstances. Thank you for your support.

As members of higher education communities, we might rightly think of our role as teachers, as facilitators of intellectual and academic dialogue, as critical thinkers, and as stewards of democracy. However, as citizens, we can and must do more. We need to put our words into action.

Now is the moment to stand with truth, to denounce lies. We must speak out against attempts to silence dissent. As an international network of institutions and individuals, we will continue to invite volunteer participation by researchers, faculty, and students in or from the region. We would also like to thank the Alexander von Humboldt Foundation for their continued support.

We are called, as teachers and scholars, to challenge those who would seek to Utilities and reason to expose and dismantle pernicious slanders, stereotypes, and databases and continue their research and academic production are protected even in the hardest circumstances. Thank you for your support.

As members of higher education communities, we might rightly think of our role as teachers, as fac